The inaugural Caroland Farms production sale participants in the seats braved the hurricane to make the trip to the farm for a fantastic sale. With worries about the storm and the possible destruction it could bring, many folks were wondering if the event would be cancelled, but the Caroland Farms decided to move forward as planned. The storm hit the day before and only brought moderate rain and no wind. Sale day itself was beautiful; sunshine with hints of fall color. The Wagyu prime rib lunch was superb, the offering well-presented and crowd was light but very active. Online was active as well and in the end, animals were sold to 7 different states and Canada.
